

GHO

GE'WAW. adj. Splendidly trifling; showy without value.
Let him that would learn the happiness of religion, see the poor gewgaw happiness of Feliciano. Law's Serious Call.

GHA'STLY. adj. [gare and pulle, Saxon.] Dreary; dismal; melancholy; fit for walking spirits.
Here would I dwell apart,
In ghastful grave, 'till my last sleep
Do close mine eyes:
Help me, ye baneful birds, whose shrieking sound
Is sign of dreary death. Spenser's Pastorals.

GHA'STLINESS. n. f. [from ghastly.]
1. Horror of countenance; resemblance of a ghost; paleness.
GHA'STLY. adj. [gare, or ghost, and like.]
1. Like a ghost; having horror in the countenance; pale; dreadful; dismal.
Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?
—O, I have past a miserable night;
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
So full of dismal terror was the time. Shakespeare's Rich. III.
Envy quickly discovered in court Solymann's changed countenance upon the great balsa, and began now to shew her ghastly face. Kneller's History of the Turks.

Grinn'd horrible a ghastly smile, to hear
His famine should be fill'd. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ii.
Those departed friends, whom at our last separation we saw disfigured by all the ghastly horrors of death, we shall then see assisting about the majestic throne of Christ, with their once vile bodies transfigured into the likeness of his glorious body, mingling their glad acclamations with the hallelujahs of thrones, principalities and powers. Boyle.

This poor man's desolate wife,
Expects some happy day;
This ghastly thing, the comfort of her life. Flatman.
He came, but with such alter'd looks,
So wild, so ghastly, as if some ghost had met him,
All pale and speechless. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
I did not for these ghastly visions send;
Their sudden coming does some ill portend. Dryden's Ind. Em.
I who make the triumph of to-day,
May of to-morrow's pomp one part appear,
Ghastly with wounds, and lifeless on the bier! Prior.

2. Horrible; shocking; dreadful.
To be less than gods
Disdain'd; but meaner thoughts learn'd in their flight,
Mangled with ghastly wounds through plate and mail. Milt.

GHA'STNESS. n. f. [from gare, Saxon.] Ghastliness; horror of look.
Look you pale, mistress?
Do you perceive the ghastness of the eye? Shakespeare's Othello.

GHE'RKIN. n. f. [from gurcke, German, a cucumber.] A pickled cucumber.
To GHESS. v. n. [See To GUESS. Ghes is by critics considered as the true orthography, but gues has universally prevailed.] To conjecture.

GHOST. n. f. [gare, Saxon.]
1. The soul of man.
Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! He hates him,
That would upon the rack of this rough world
Stretch him out longer. Shakespeare's King Lear.
Often did I strive
To yield the ghost; but still the envious flood
Kept in my soul. Shakespeare's R. III.
Man, when once cut down, when his pale ghost
Fleets into air, is for ever lost. Sandys's Paraphrase.

2. A spirit appearing after death.
The mighty ghosts of our great Harrys rose,
And armed Edwards look'd with anxious eyes,
To see this fleet among unequal foes,
By which fate promis'd them their Charles should rise. Dryden.

3. To give up the GHOST. To die; to yield up the spirit into the hands of God.
Their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies ready to give up the ghost. Shakespeare's Jul. Cæs.

4. The third person in the adorable Trinity, called the Holy Ghost.
To GHOST. v. n. [from the noun.] To yield up the ghost; to die. Not in use.
Euryalus taking leave of Lucretia, precipitated her into such a love-fit, that within a few hours she ghosted; which course Euryalus was like to have steered, upon the news. Sidney.

To GHOST. v. a. To haunt with apparitions of departed men. Obsolete.
Julius Cæsar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,
There saw you labouring for him. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleop.

GHO'STLINESS. n. f. [from ghostly.] Spiritual tendency; quality of having reference chiefly to the soul.

GHO'STLY. adj. [from ghost.]
1. Spiritual; relating to the soul; not carnal; not secular.
Our common necessities, and the lack which we all have,

as well of ghostly as of earthly favours, is in each kind so easily known, but the gifts of God, according to these degrees and times, which he in his secret wisdom seeth meet, are so diversely bestowed, that it seldom appeareth what all receive, what all stand in need of, it seldom lieth hid. Hooker, b. v. f. 35.

The graces of the spirit are much more precious than worldly benefits, and our ghostly evils of greater importance than any harm which the body feeleth. Hooker, b. v. f. 35.

To deny me the ghostly comfort of my chaplains, seems a greater barbarity than is ever used by Christians. King Charles.

2. Having a character from religion; spiritual.
Hence will I to my ghostly friar's clove cell,
His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. Sh. R. and Jul.
The ghostly father now hath done his shrift. Shakespeare's H. VI.

GIALALINA. n. f. [Italian.] Earth of a bright gold colour, found in the kingdom of Naples, very fine, and much valued by painters. Woodward's Met. Ess.

GIAMBEUX. n. f. [jambe, French.] Legs, or armour for legs; greaves.
The mortal steel dispiteously entail'd,
Deep in their flesh, quite through the iron walls,
That a large purple stream adown their gamboux falls. F. 2.

GIANT. n. f. [geant, French; gigas, Latin.] A man of size above the ordinary rate of men; a man unnaturally large. It is observable, that the idea of a giant is always associated with pride, brutality, and wickedness.
Now does he feel his axle
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe
Upon a dwarfish thief. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet through,
And keep their impious turbans on, without
Good-morrow to the sun. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
Woman's gentle brain
Could not drop forth such giant rude invention;
Such Ethiop words. Shakespeare's As you like it.
Fierce faces threaten wars,
Giants of mighty bone, and bold emprise! Milt. P. L.
Those giants, those mighty men, and men of renown, far exceeded the proportion, nature, and strength of those giants remembered by Moses of his own time. Raleigh's History.
The giant brothers, in their camp, have found
I was not forc'd with ease to quit my ground. Dryden's En.
By weary steps and flow
The groping giant with a trunk of pine
Explored his way. Addison.
Neptune, by pray'r repentant, rarely won,
Afflicts the chief to avenge his giant son,
Great Polyphemus, of more than mortal might. Pope.

GIANTESS. n. f. [from giant.] A she-giant; a woman of unnatural bulk and height.
I had rather be a giantess, and lie under mount Pelion. Shak.
Were this subject to the cedar, she would be able to make head against that huge giantess. Howell.

GI'ANTLIKE. adj. [from giant and like.] Gigantic; vast; GI'ANTLY. adv.
Single courage, has often, without romance, overcome giantly difficulties. Deacy of Piety.
Notwithstanding all their talk of reason and philosophy, which they are deplorably strangers to, and those unanswerable doubts and difficulties, which over their cups, they pretend to have against Christianity; persuade but the covetous man not to dely his money, the proud man not to adore himself, and I dare undertake that all their giantlike objections against the Christian religion shall presently vanish and quit the field. South's Sermons.

GI'ANTSHIP. n. f. [from giant.] Quality or character of a giant.
His giantship is gone somewhat crest-fall'n,
Stalking with less unconscionable strides,
And lower looks. Milton's Arcist.

GI'BBE. n. f. Any old worn-out animal.
For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wife,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gibbe,
Such dear concerns hide? Shakespeare's Hamlet.

To GI'BBE. v. n. [from jabber.] To speak inarticulately.
The sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

GI'BBERISH. n. f. [Derived by Skinner from gaber, French, to cheat; by others conjectured to be formed by corruption from jabber. But as it was anciently written gebrish, it is probably derived from the chymical cant, and originally implied the jargon of Geber and his tribe.] Cant; the private language of rogues and gipnies; words without meaning.
Some, if they happen to hear an old word, albeit very natural and significant, cry out straitway, that we speak no English, but gibberish. Spenser.
Some of both sexes writing down a number of letters, just as it came into their heads; upon reading this gibberish, that which the men had wrote sounded like High Dutch, and the other by the women like Italian. Swift.

GIB

GI'BBET. n. f. [gibet, French.]
1. A gallows, the post on which malefactors are hanged, or on which their carcases are exposed.
When was there ever curied atheist brought
Unto the gibbet, but he did adore
That blessed pow'r which he had set at naught? Davies.
You scandal to the stock of verse, a race
Able to bring the gibbet in disgrace.
Haman suffered death himself upon the very gibbet that he had provided for another.
Papers of universal approbation, lay such principles to the whole body of the Tories, as, if they were true, our next business should be to erect gibbets in every parish, and hang them out of the way. Swift.

2. Any traverse beams.
To GI'BBET. v. n. [from the noun.]
1. To hang or expose on a gibbet.
I'll gibbet up his name. Oldham.
2. To hang on any thing going traverse: as the beam of a gibbet.
He shall come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. Shakespeare's Henry IV. p. ii.

GI'BBIER. n. f. [French.] Game; wild fowl.
These impots are laid on all butcher's meat, while, at the same time, the fowl and gibber are tax free. Addison on Italy.

GI'BBOSITY. n. f. [gibbosity, Fr. from gibbus.] Convexity; prominence; protuberance.
When two ships, sailing contrary ways, lose the sight one of another, what should take away the sight of ships from each other, but the gibbosity of the interjacent water? Ray.

GI'BBOUS. adj. [gibbus, Latin; gibbeux, Fr.]
1. Convex; protuberant; swelling into inequalities.
The bones will rise, and make a gibbous member. Wise man.
A pointed flinty rock, all bare and black,
Grew gibbous from behind the mountain's back. Dryden.
The sea, by this access and recess, shuffling the empty shells, wears them away, reducing those that are concave and gibbous to a flat. Woodward's Natural History.

2. Crookbacked.
I shall demand how the camels of Baçria came to have two bunches in their back, whereas the camels of Arabia, in all relations, have but one? How oxen, in some countries, began and continue gibbous, or hunch-backed? Brown.

GI'BBOUSNESS. n. f. [from gibbus.] Convexity; prominence.
To make the convexity of the earth discernible, suppose a man lifted in the air, that he may have a spacious horizon; but then, because of the distance, the convexity and gibbousness would vanish away, and he would only see a great circular flat. Bentley's Sermons.

GI'BBAT. n. f. [gib and eat.] An old worn-out cat.
I am as melancholy as a gibbat, or a lugg'd bear. Shakespeare.
To GIBBE. v. n. [gaber, old French, to sneer, to ridicule.] To sneer; to join censoriousness with contempt.
They seem to imagine that we have erected of late a frame of some new religion, the furniture whereof we should not have borrowed from our enemies, lest they should afterwards laugh and gibe at our party. Hooker, b. iv. f. 9.
When he saw her toy, and gibe, and geer,
And pass the bounds of modest merry-make,
Her dalliance he despis'd. Fairy Queen, b. ii. cant. 6.
Why that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace
Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools. Shakespeare.
Thus with talents well endu'd
To be scurrilous and rude,
When you partly raise your snout,
Flee and gibe, and laugh and flout. Swift.

To GIBE. v. a. To reproach by contemptuous hints; to flout; to scoff; to ridicule; to treat with scorn; to sneer; to taunt.
When rioting in Alexandria: you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my mistive out of audience. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleop.
Draw the beasts as I describe them,
From their features, while I gibe them. Swift.

GIBBE. n. f. [from the verb.] Sneer; hint of contempt by word or look; scoff; act or expression of scorn; taunt.
Mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable frowns
That dwell in ev'ry region of his face. Shakespeare's Othello.
The rich have still a gibe in store,
And will be monstrous witty on the poor. Dryden's Juven.
If they would hate from the bottom of their hearts, their aversion would be too strong for little gibes every moment. Spektator, N.º. 300.

But the dean, if this secret shou'd come to his ears,
Will never have done with his gibes and his jeers. Swift.

GI'BER. n. f. [from gibe.] A sneerer; one who turns others to ridicule by contemptuous hints; a scoffer; a taunter.
You are well understood to be a more perfect giber of the table, than a necessary bencher of the capitol. Shakespeare's Cor.

GID

Come, Sempronius, leave him;
He is a giber, and our present business
Is of more serious consequence. Ben. Johnson's Cautious.

GI'RINGLY. adv. [from gibe.] Scornfully; contemptuously.
His present portance.
Gibingly and ungravelly he did fashion
After th' inveterate hate he bears to you. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

GI'BLETS. n. f. [According to Mishew from gibbet, gibbet: according to Junius more probably from giblet, game, Fr.]
The parts of a goose which are cut off before it is roasted.
'Tis holiday; provide me better cheer:
'Tis holiday; and shall be round the year:
Shall I my household gods and genius cheat,
To make him rich who grudges me my meat?
That he may loll at ease; and pamper'd high,
When I am laid, may feed on giblet pie. Dryden's Pers.

GI'DDILY. adv. [from giddy.]
1. With the head seeming to turn round.
2. Inconstantly; unsteadily.
To roam
Giddily, and be every where but at home,
Such freedom doth a banishment become. Donne.

3. Carelessly; heedlessly; negligently.
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,
Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune. Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

GI'DDINESS. n. f. [from giddy.]
1. The state of being giddy or vertiginous; the sensation which we have when every thing seems to turn round.
Megrimms and giddiness are rather when we rise after long sitting, than while we sit. Bacon's Natural History.

2. Inconstancy; unsteadiness; mutability; changeableness.
There be that delight in giddiness, and count it a bondage to fix a belief.
3. Quick rotation; inability to keep its place.
The indignation of heaven rolling and turning us, 'till at length such a giddiness seized upon government, that it fell into the very dregs of fecitaries. South's Sermons.

4. Frolick; wantonness of life.
Thou, like a contrite penitent,
Charitably warn'd of thy sins, do't repent
These vanities and giddinesses. Donne.

GI'DDY. adj. [gibiz, Saxon. I know not whether this word may not come from gad, to wander, to be in motion, gad, gid, giddy.]
1. Vertiginous; having in the head a whirl, or sensation of circular motion, such as happens by disease or drunkenness.
Them rev'ling thus the Tentyrites invade,
By giddy heads and staggering legs betray'd. Tate's Juvenal.

2. Rotatory; whirling; running round with celerity.
As Ixion fix'd, the wretch shall feel
The giddy motion of the whirling mill. Pope.

3. Inconstant; mutable; unsteady; changeful.
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and won,
Than womens are. Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.
It may be gnats and flies have their imagination more mutable and giddy, as small birds likewise have. Bacon's N. Hist.
Thanks to giddy chance, which never bears
That mortal bliss should last for length of years,
She cast us headlong from our high estate,
And here in hope of thy return we wait. Dryden's Fables.
The giddy vulgar, as their fancies guide,
With noise lay nothing, and in parts divide. Dryden's En.
You are as giddy and volatile as ever, the reverie of Pope, who hath always loved a domestic life. Swift to Gay.

4. That which causes giddiness.
The frequent errors of the pathless wood,
The giddy precipice, and the dang'rous flood. Prior.
The sylphs through my tick mazes guide their way,
Through all the giddy circle they pursue. Pope.

5. Heedless; thoughtless; uncautious; wild.
Too many giddy foolish hours are gone,
And in fantastick measures danc'd away. Rowe's Ja. Shore.
How inexcusable are those giddy creatures, who, in the same hour, leap from a parent's window to a husband's bed. Clarissa.

6. Tottering; unfixed.
As we pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,
Methought that Glotter stumbled. Shakespeare's Rich. III.

7. Intoxicated; elated to thoughtlessness; overcome by any overpowering inticement.
Art thou not giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion? Shakespeare.
Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes;
Hearing applause and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, gazing still in doubt,
Whether those peals of praise be his or no. Shakespeare's Pers.

GI'DDYBRAINED. adj. [giddy and brain.] Careless; thoughtless.
